1. The planning of the production of railway signalling equipment has been transferred from the Telecommunications Section of the telephone factory at Budapest to the Planning Office for Railway Safety Signalling Equipment of the Hungarian State Railways (MAV).
2. To achieve this change-over, the leading officials were transferred from the Telecommunications Section to the new MAV Planning Office for Railway Safety Signalling Equipment. Among these officials were the head of the Telecommunications Section, and a certain TAKACS (fnu), an engineer who was selected to reorganize the section. All the personnel who had originally been transferred from the MAV to the Telecommunications Section, were transferred back again. The Planning Office for Railway Safety Signalling Equipment at present comprises 30 persons.
3. Apart from the manufacture of railway signalling equipment and telecommunication appliances, the telephone factory has sections which produce:
  - a radar instruments
  - b TERTA projectors
  - c cinema machines for civil purposes
  - d relays used with large-caliber guns
  - e parts for service motors
  - f parts for anti-aircraft guns
  - g pneumatic rail-breaks of the Matrozoff type
4. The supply of materials to the factory is adequate at present. Occasionally materials are switched from one section to another, according to the priority allotted to the various products.
